REPORT No. 98-24

INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT ACT

MARCH 14, 1983.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. Dole, from the Committee on Finance, submitted the following

REPORT

[To accompany S. 144]

The Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (S. 144) to amend the Trade Act of 1974 to ensure reciprocal trade opportunities, and for other purposes, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon with amendments and recommends that the bill as amended do pass. The Finance Committee amendments are shown in the reported bill with matter proposed to be deleted struck through and the matter to be inserted shown in bold italic type.

I. SUMMARY

The Committee bill would amend Titles I and III of the Trade Act of 1974 by mandating new specific sector negotiating objectives with respect to trade in services, high technology products, and restrictions on foreign direct investment; by giving the President tariff modification authority on certain high technology items; by authorizing the establishment of intergovernmental advisory committees; by requiring the United States Trade Representative to analyze and report on significant barriers to trade in U.S. products and services and restrictions on foreign direct investment by U.S. persons; by clarifying the President's authority to retaliate with respect to any goods or sector, whether or not involved in the act retaliated against and to take action notwithstanding any other delegation of authority to regulatory agencies; by providing the President with the authority to propose "fast track" legislation under the authority of sections 102 and 151 of the Trade Act to carry out the objectives of section 301; by defining the term "commerce" to include foreign direct investment with implications for trade in goods and services, thereby permitting the President to retaliate against restrictions on such investment; by statutorily defining the terms "unjustifiable", "unreasonable", and "discriminatory"; by providing for the initiation of section 301 investigations by the USTR; by providing for delays of up to 90 days in the initiation of international consultations required by section 303; and by providing a specific exemption from the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act for information supplied under specified conditions during an investigation under section 301 and restrictions on the use of such information.

II. GENERAL EXPLANATION

CURRENT LAW

The President's principle authority to retaliate against foreign unfair trade practices is section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2411). Section 301 was amended by the Trade Agreements Act of 1979 (P.L. 96-39). Two major changes were made. The President's authority was expanded in order that he would have clear authority to pursue U.S. rights under any applicable trade agreements, and time limits were established for the conclusion of section 301 investigations.

Under section 301, as amended, the President is authorized, where appropriate, to use the authority set forth therein to enforce U.S. rights under trade agreements, including the various nontariff agreements negotiated in the Multilateral Trade Negotiating. The law provides a process through which private parties can seek U.S. government action to enforce rights created by these agreements. It requires that consultations be initiated under the dispute settlement procedure of the applicable international agreement, if any. The time requirements set forth in section 301 within which the President must act are also keyed to the dispute settlement procedure in the particular agreement under which the complaint is brought.

The President is also authorized, where appropriate, to use section 301 to respond to any "act, policy, or practice" of a foreign country that is inconsistent with the provisions of or denies benefits to the United States under any trade agreement, or is "unjustifiable," "unreasonable," or "discriminatory" and burdens or restricts United States commerce. All acts, policies, or practices covered under the 1974 Act are covered under section 301, as amended, notwithstanding the deletion of the specific reference to subsidies and access restrictions as unfair acts. Amendments to the 1979 Act also clarified that U.S. "commerce" includes all services associated with international trade and not just those associated with trade in memberodise and not just those associated with trade in merchandise.

The President's retaliatory authority remained begins li-

The President's retaliatory authority remained basically unchanged in the 1979 Act. The President is authorized to take any action otherwise within his authority to respond to the foreign unfair actions. He is also authorized to suspend, withdraw, or modify trade agreement concessions or impose duties or other import restrictions or fees on the products or services of the foreign country.

Another change made by the 1979 Act was to provide a procedure through which the public could request from the USTR certain information on foreign trade policies or practices. If such information is not available, the USTR is required to request it from the relevant foreign government or decline to do so and inform the person making the request in writing of the reasons for refusing.

THE COMMITTEE BILL

The bill approved by the Committee would make the following changes to the Trade Act of 1974:

(1) A new section 104A would be added providing specific negotiating objectives with respect to trade in services, high technology products, and restrictions on foreign direct investment;

nology products, and restrictions on foreign direct investment;
(2) Section 135, which sets up a procedure through which trade negotiating advice is received from the private sector, would be amended to authorize the establishment of intergovernmental advisory committees;

(3) A new section 181 would be added requiring annual national trade estimates on significant barriers to the exportation of U.S. goods and services and restrictions on U.S. foreign direct investment, any action taken to eliminate these barriers, and consultations with the Finance and Ways and Means Committees on trade policy priorities to enhance market opportunities;

(4) Section 301 would be amended to provide the President with specific authority to retaliate against any goods or sector, whether or not involved in the act retaliated against and the President would specifically be authorized to retaliate against a good or service notwithstanding authority of regulatory agencies to deal with the same matters;

(5) Section 301 would be amended to authorize the President to retaliate against restrictions on foreign direct investment by U.S. persons with implications for trade in goods and services, or to otherwise carry out the objectives of 301 by proposing "fast track" legislation under the authority of sections 102 and 151 of the Trade Act of 1974;

(6) Section 301 would be amended by statutorily defining the terms "unreasonable", "unjustifiable" and "discriminatory" which currently exist in section 301 but are not defined;

(7) Section 302 would be amended to provide for the self-initiation of section 301 investigations by USTR;

- (8) Section 303, which currently provides that international consultations must be initiated on the same date as an investigation is instituted under section 301 would be amended to provide for a delay of up to 90 days before the initiation of consultations; and
- (9) Section 305 would be amended to provide for a specific exemption from the Freedom of Information Act for information received during an investigation under section 301 and restrictions on the use of such information.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 1 of the bill sets forth the short title, "the International Trade and Investment Act".

Section 2 sets forth the statement of purposes of the bill. These purposes include the fostering of U.S. economic growth and employment by expanding competitive U.S. exports through the achievement of commercial opportunities in foreign markets substantially equivalent to those accorded by the United States; improving the ability of the President to identify and analyze barriers to U.S. trade and investment; encouraging the expansion of international trade in services through the negotiation of international agreements; and enhancing the free flow of foreign direct investment through the negotiation of bilateral and multilateral agreements.

Section 3 requires annual national trade estimates on significant barriers to U.S. commerce, reports to Congress on action taken (including but not limited to any action under section 301) on matters identified in the national trade estimates, and administrative provisions related to these estimates. Under present law the Executive Branch has been slow to identify critical problems or to take advantage of trade agreements to enforce United States rights of market access. Formulating national trade estimates is a step in the direction of a more active policy of enforcing United States rights under trade agreements and identifying objectives for future negotiations. Under subsection (a) the USTR, through the interagency Trade Policy Committee, would be required to identify the acts, policies, and practices which constitute significant barriers to or distortions of U.S. exports of goods or services and U.S. foreign direct investment. In addition to foreign barriers, these could include U.S. export disincentives.

The bill specifies that the USTR shall identify and analyze acts, policies, and practices which restrict or distort foreign direct investment by U.S. persons especially if such investment has implications for trade in goods or services. It is the Committee's intention that the USTR should focus its efforts in the area of trade related investment issues and not on other issues, such as the expropriation of U.S.

The bill also requires the USTR to make an estimate of the trade distorting impact of any act, policy, or practice identified. In making the national trade estimates the USTR is directed to take into account a number of specified factors including the relative impact of the barriers, the availability of relevant information, and the extent to which the barriers are subject to international agreements as well as advice received under the advisory committee process. It is the Committee's intention in using the word "significant" and setting forth these factors among others to be considered that the USTR will proceed against those barriers to the expansion of market opportunities which are most important in terms of U.S. commercial interests and with respect to which there is the greatest likelihood of achieving solutions, particularly within accepted international procedures.

The specific inclusion of the Trade Policy Committee in this process is intended to make clear that the bill in no way serves to reorganize existing agency functions. Rather the structure established under section 242(a) of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 is to continue to be utilized. While it is the intention of the Committee that the national trade estimates should be as specific as practicable, it is not intended that they serve to prejudge or to prejudice any persons which have been or may be brought under the dispute settlement process.

Subsection (b) requires the USTR to submit the analysis and estimate within one year of the date of enactment of the bill and annually thereafter to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance. These reports are to include information on any action being taken with respect to the actions which have been identified and analyzed including but not limited to actions under section 301 or international negotiations or consultations. While not requiring that any particular action be taken, the Committee intends that the USTR should consider vigorously utilizing existing authorities and dispute settlement procedures to deal with the identified barriers and distortions. This subsection also requires the USTR to keep the Ways and Means and Finance Committees currently informed on trade policy priorities for the purpose of expanding market opportunities. These consultations are not statutorily tied to the analysis and reporting requirements, but it is the Committee's intention that the required consultations draw heavily on the information and estimates developed during this process. Information contained in national trade estimates may be classified or otherwise not be made public to the extent appropriate to the information contained therein.

In carrying out the requirements of this section, the head of each department or agency of the executive branch of the Government is authorized and directed to furnish to the USTR, or to the appropriate agency upon request, such data, reports, and information as necessary for the USTR to carry out his functions under this section. The authorization for agencies to furnish information to the "appropriate agency" is intended only to maintain existing interagency reporting relationships, such as that of the Federal Reserve with the Department of the Treasury, and is not intended to impair the ultimate transmission of information to the USTR. It is the Committee's intention that this authority should be used by the USTR to request only that information which is reasonably available to the particular agency. It is not intended to be a general grant of authority to require such agencies to gather information. The information may be requested and used to the extent not otherwise inconsistent with law. This specific limitation is intended by the Committee to make clear that information such as that obtained by the Internal Revenue Service is not within the scope of that which could be requested by or released to the USTR. It is also the Committee's intention that information to be made available to the USTR would be provided subject to lawful regulations governing the protection of national security, business confidential, or otherwise privileged information.

Section 4 of the bill makes a number of amendments to Title III of the Trade Act of 1974. Section 301(a) currently provides that action under this section may be taken on a nondiscriminatory basis or solely against the products or services of the foreign country or instrumentality involved. The bill would amend current law to provide that the President may exercise his authority specifically with respect to any goods or sector, on a nondiscriminatory basis or solely against the foreign country or instrumentality involved, and without regard to whether or not such goods or sectors were involved in the act, policy, or practice identified. This change in language is not intended to confer new retaliatory authority on the President; rather it is intended to clarify the President's existing authority. The use of the word "product" in current law has raised questions as to whether its scope is limited to articles which have undergone some manufacturing or transforming process. The use of the word "goods" is intended to clarify that the President would have the authority to retaliate against any article whether or not it had undergone processing. Similarly the change from the word "service" to "sector" is intended to clarify that the President, in acting under section 301, could exercise his powers with respect to services offered by foreign countries or foreign nationals as well as with respect to foreign direct investment in the United States either under legislation proposed under the "fast track" authority which would be established or any other independent grant of authority. At present such authority appears to be limited to the Mineral Lands Leasing Act of 1920 (30 USC 181) and section 48 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Section 301(b) currently authorizes the President to retaliate (1) by modifying trade agreement concessions and (2) by imposing duties or other import restrictions on the products of, or fees or restrictions on the services of a foreign country. The bill would make the conforming changes of the word "goods" for the word "products" and would insert the phrase "notwithstanding any other provision of law" before the word "impose". This amendment is intended to clarify the President's existing authority to impose restrictions notwithstanding the authority of an independent agency. While the authority of the President under section 301 is broad, the Committee does intend it be used purdently. It may appropriately be used to impose restrictions on services previously licensed by an independent agency or by denying the grant of such a license, but the Committee does not anticipate the authority would be used to override U.S. treaty obligations.

The bill would also amend section 301 (b) by adding a new subsection (3) authorizing the President to propose "fast track" legislation under the procedures of sections 102 and 151 of the Trade Act of 1974 to carry out the objectives of section 301 where additional retaliatory authority may be necessary. Since the definition of "commerce" in section 301 (d) would also be amended to include foreign direct investment by U.S. person with implications for trade in 16 good or services", this would permit the President to propose "fast track" legislation providing for retaliation against, or designed to encourage the elimination of, restrictions on U.S. foreign direct investment. The Committee does not intend that the authority to propose "fast track" legislation in any way restrict the President's authority to propose legislation under nonfast track procedures. The choice of whether or not to utilize the "fast track" would be solely within the President's discretion. Under the bill all the requirements for "fast track" legislation set forth in sections 102 and 151 would be applicable, including 90 days consultation with the cognizant committees prior to submitting such legislation.

Section 301(d) currently contains a definition of the term "commerce". As set forth above, the bill would amend subsection (d) by amending the term "commerce" to include foreign direct investment by U.S. persons with implications for trade in goods and services. It is not the Committee's understanding, however, that this language would preclude the USTR, where appropriate, from conducting an investigation on portfolio investments. It would also include in that subsection definitions of the terms "unreasonable", "unjustifiable", and "discriminatory", which currently exist in section 301 but are not statutorily defined. The definitions of these three terms are not intended to expand the scope of the President's authority with respect to the types of acts against which he can retaliate, other than with respect to foreign direct investment as notfied above. It is the Committee's intention that the definitions clarify existing law and give emphasis to the President's authority to retaliate against certain types of acts, policies,

The term "unreasonable" is defined as any act, policy, or practice which, while not necessarily in violation of or inconsistent with the international legal rights of the United States, is otherwise deemed to be unfair and inequitable. The term includes, but is not limited to, a denial of fair and equitable market opportunities, opportunities for the establishment of an enterprise, or provision of adequate protection of intellectual property rights. The phrase "fair and equitable" is not defined, since it remains within the President's discretion to determine when circumstances exist which require action under this provision. The Committee believes the President will take into account a broad range of factors in making his determination as to when to proceed, but by including a specific noninclusive list in the bill wishes to emphasize that certain acts, policies and practices which are not necessarily in violation of specific international agreements are becoming increasingly harmful to U.S. interests and should be dealt with Among these acts are investment distorting practices. Performance requirements and other restrictions not impair or distort the free flow of capital and inhibit U.S. firms from establishing themselves and operating abroad are increasingly adversely affecting U.S. trade interests. The Committee has also received testimony and information concerning increasingly frequent problems regarding the denial of adequate portion by foreign countries of U.S. intellectual property rights." The term is intended to be understood in the broadest sense and shall term is intended to be understood in the broadest sense and shall include patents, trade marks, trade names, copyrights, and trade secrets. Some of the problems concerning intellectual property rights involve broad areas of invention not subject to patent coverage in foreign countries, such as chemical products; unreasonable forced licensing and forfeiture provisions for patents; unduly short patent rights involving the inability to enjoin infringemet; very low or token fines where infringement is proved, protracted delay of proceedings with no interim relief available to the patent holder; and practically impossible burdens of proof of process infringement placed on patent holder, and the like.

The Committee believes that in determining whether adequate protection is being provided for such rights the President should consider the scope and degree of protection of the foreign country's laws and procedures. A key factor in the USTR's determination of whether to initiate a section 301 petition should be a consideration of the appropriate legal action available to, or taken by, the aggrieved United States party to defend its rights in the subject country. The Committee expects, however, that if the U.S. Trade Representative determines not to initiate a section 301 petition, due to pending action by a foreign country's judiciary, action on the petition should be postponed only for a reasonable period of time.

The term "unjustifiable" is defined asan y act, policy, or practice which is in violation of or inconsistent with the international legal rights of the United States, including but not limited to a denal of national or most-favored-nation treatment, the right of establishment or a denial of protection of intellectual property rights. It is the belief of the Committee that this definition conforms with existing law and legislative history and is not an expansion of the category of unjustifiable actions against which retaliation can be taken. The definition continues to address actions by a foreign government that are inconsistent with U.S. international legal rights.

The term "discriminatory" is defined as including where appropriate any act, policy, or practice which denies national or most-favorednation treatment to U.S. goods, services, or investment. The phrase "where appropriate" has been included in the definition only to take into account those situations in which a denial of national or mostfavored-nation treatment, for example in the case of a GATT-compatible customs union, is not an appropriate basis for action.

The bill amends section 302 of the Trade Act by authorizing the USTR to self-initiate investigations under section 301. According to testimony received by the Committee, in many cases U.S. exporters adversely affected by foreign practices inconsistent with U.S. trade agreement rights do not petition for assistance under section 301 for legitimate reasons, such as lack of information or a fear of retaliation. Therefore a vigorous policy of self-initiation is necessary to preserve U.S. market access. Under current law, the President is authorized to take action either as a result of petition-initiated investigation or, on his own motion, but the USTR is not authorized to initiate investigations to provide a foundation which advice could be provided to the President. While providing authority for the USTR to initiate investigations, the bill provides that a decision to do so could only be taken after consultation with appropriate committees established under section 135. Under the bill if the USTR determines to initiate this determination is to be published in the Federal Register and treated as if an affirmation on a petition had been made on the same date. This provision is intended to bring into play all the provisions applicable to cases initiated by petition.

It is anticipated that USTR initiated cases would be the result of careful study, usually accomplished by national trade estimates, as well as careful coordination with statutory advisory committees. This process should, overall, result in a more coherent, aggressive, trade policy.

The bill would amend section 302 to require that a summary of the petition on the basis of which an investigation is instituted, rather than the petition itself, be published in the Federal Register. Copies of the documents would be provided at cost. The publication of entire petitions in the Federal Register has become an increasingly costly undertaking. The Committee believes that publication of a summary together with the availability of the documents at reproduction cost will save money and at the same time provide the public with adequate notice and information with respect to cases which are instituted.

Section 303 of the Trade Act currently provides that on the date an affirmative determination is made to institute an investigation under section 301 the USTR must request consultations with the foreign country concerned regarding the issues raised in the petition. The administration has testified that the requirement of simultaneous initiation and requests for consultations has caused problems in several cases in which the petitions on which investigations are initiated did not provide an adequate basis for proceeding internationally. The bill would amend section 303 to provide USTR with the authority to delay for up to 90 days any request for consultations for the purpose of verifying or improving the petition to insure an adequate basis for consultation. The bill would also require the USTR to publish notice of the delay in the Federal Register and report to Congress on the reasons for such delay in the report currently required under section 306. It is the belief of the Committee that this authority should be used only in the unusual circumstances described and that the USTR should continue to make every effort to conclude section 301 actions within the prescribed normal time limits.

The bill reported by the Committee would also amend section 305 by adding a new subsection with respect to the treatment of confidential business information. The administration has testified that many U.S. firms or groups are reluctant to petition for investigations under section 301 because of their concern that confidential business information which they might provide during the course of the proceeding might be subject to disclosure or that they will be subject to retaliatory actions in the offending country. The bill provides a specific exception from the Freedom of Information Act for business confidential information requested and received by the USTR in aid of any investigation under Chapter 1 of Title III of the Trade Act and provides that such information shall not be made available if submitted under the circumstances set forth therein. The bill further provides the USTR with authority to prescribe regulations concerning provision of nonconfidential summaries of such information in order to give USTR the necessary flexibility in dealing with foreign countries or instrumentalities which provide such information but cannot be compelled to provide summaries. The bill also authorizes the USTR to use the information or make it available to an employee of the Federal Government for use in a section 301 investigation but requires that it be made available to any other person only in a form in which it cannot be associated with the source of the information. The Committee believes that by protecting confidential information and its source these provisions will encourage and facilitate the filing of legitimate petitions under section 301, as well as encouraging and supporting selfinitiated investigations.

Section 5 of the bill would amend Chapter 1 of title I of the Trade Act by adding a new section 104A providing specific negotiating objectives with respect to international trade in services and investment and high technology products. Under the provisions of the bill principal U.S. negotiating objectives with respect to trade in services would be the reduction or elimination of barriers to or distortions of international trade in services and the development of internationally agreed rules, including dispute settlement procedures, to reduce or to eliminate such barriers. The terms "services" and "services associated with international trade" have not been defined. The committee was concerned that any definition would be limiting. The intent of the committee is that "services" and, for purposes of section 301 "services associated with international trade" be defined as broadly as possible.

Similarly the bill sets forth as negotiating objectives with respect to foreign direct investment, the reduction or elimination of artificial or trade distorting barriers, the development of rules, including dispute settlement procedures, to ensure the free flow of foreign direct investment, and the reduction or elimination of the trade distortive effects of certain investment-related trade measures.

The bill also provides U.S. negotiating objectives with respect to high technology products. Among these are to obtain and to preserve the maximum openness of trade and investment in high technology products and related services; to obtain the elimination or reduction of, or compensation for, the significantly distorting effects of foreign government actions which affect trade in high technology products identified in the studies which would be required under section 181; to obtain commitments that the official policy of foreign governments or instrumentalities will not discourage government or private procurement of foreign high technology products; to obtain the reduction or elimination of all tariffs and barriers on U.S. exports of high technology products particularly key commodity products (a term the committee uses to identify standardized products sold in substantial quantities throughout the world such as the 64,000 random access memory electronic silicon chip); to obtain commitments to foster national treatment; to obtain commitments to foster pursuit of joint scientific cooperation and to ensure that access to the results of cooperative efforts should not be impaired; and to provide minimum safeguards for the acquisition and enforcement of intellectual property rights and the property value of proprietary data.

Section 6 of the bill contains additional provisions with respect to trade in services. Subsection (a) provides that the USTR, through the interagency Trade Policy Committee, shall develop and coordinate U.S. policies concerning trade in services and that each department or agency responsible for the regulation of a service industry shall advise and work with the USTR concerning matters that have come to the department's or agency's attention with respect to the treatment of U.S. service sector interests in foreign markets or allegations of unfair practices by foreign governments or companies in a service sector. The committee intends that the existing trade policy structure be utilized to develop and coordinate policies concerning trade in services but has specified that these efforts be carried out in conformance with existing provisions of law in order to ensure that no authority granted under this section be construed as altering the existing authority of any agency or department with respect to any specific service sector.

Subsection (b) would establish in the Department of Commerce a service industry development program. Subsection (c) provides that it is the policy of the Congress that the President shall, as he deems appropriate, consult with state governments on issues of trade policy affecting them. It also authorizes the President to establish one or more intergovernmental policy advisory committees under the structure and procedures established in Section 135 of the Trade Act. It is the committee's intention that these intergovernmental advisory committees be established and utilized only in the areas, like insurance or procurement, where the states have particular interests and not across the broad spectrum of trade issues.

Section 7 of the bill would amend section 102 of the Trade Act by defining the term "international trade" to include foreign direct investment by United States persons, especially if such investment has implications for trade in goods and services. This change would provide the President with specific authority to negotiate with respect to barriers on such foreign direct investment.

Section 8 of the bill would provide the President with authority to enter into bilateral or multilateral agreements as may be necessary to achieve the objectives of this section and those set forth in the proposed section 104A(c) concerning high technology products. Subsection (b) would provide the President with a five-year authority to eliminate the duties on specified items within six item numbers of the Tariff Schedules of the United States in order to carry out any agreement concluded as a result of the negotiating objectives under the proposed section 104A.

III. VOTE OF THE COMMITTEE

In compliance with section 133 of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, the committee states that the bill was ordered favorably reported without objection.

IV. BUDGETARY IMPACT OF THE BILL

In compliance with section 252(a) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1970, the following statement is made relative to the costs to be incurred in carrying out the bill and the effect on revenues of the bill. The committee does not expect any immediate impact on revenues from the tariff reducing authority provided in the bill. It is expected that the negotiations authorized by the bill will not be completed for some time. If the full authority were used to eliminate duties on the seven specified items the committee estimates there could be a possible loss of customs revenues of between $400 million and $500 million dollars by 1987.

V. REGULATORY IMPACT OF THE BILL

In compliance with paragraph 11(b) of rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, the committee states that the provisions of the committee bill will not regulate any individuals or businesses, will not impact on the personal privacy of individuals, and will result in no additional paperwork.

VI. CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW

In compliance with paragraph 12 of rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, the changes in existing law made by the bill as reported are shown below (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italic, existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):
